SECTION CHIEF, HUMAN/ARTIFACT INTERFACE RESEARCH

Because of the delicate nature of the work, existing at the leading edge of museum technology, the role of the Chief is a complex one and requires very special attributes. Primarily, the candidate must have either a PhD in Sociology or be a vegetarian. Male orientation is desirable (as is preference). It is essential that he be present at the birth of his section. His dress should be fussy and studied, with sandals as an allowable eccentricity. A small, wispy goatee would be a distinct asset, as would circular glasses with very thin gold rims. He should eat trail mix from a brown bag on his desk. He would cycle to work. His office should be furnished by Ikea with subtle touches of the Orient. A knowledge of languages is desirable particularly those spoken by anthropologists and computer programmers. As an adjunct to this, abuse of grammar and syntax will be considered highly desirable tools.

POSITION DEMANDED

Upwardly mobile, professional bureaucrat in a museum context finds himself in a non-upwardly progressing, immobile ad hoc institute. Willing to temporarily or semi-permanently relocate vis-a-vis a pro-actively motivated bilingual position in dedicated, fully sanctioned government department. Familiar with inter-institutional policies, bilingual side-by-side format, central agency requirements and guidelines, and principal asset utilization as specified in Treasury Board Circular A-377601 for modular shelving. Capable of interfacing in real time with administrative function upon approval with downsized vital core multi-year operational planning inter-managerially approved personnel function....

Name of applicant available on receipt of Form #254119-002.
